Talking Points:

Why we care: Keeping tough conversations free from emotional distraction allows people to listen, take accountability and respond with the desired behavioral changes. Taking the four-question Speak the Truth quiz (found in the webinar slides) to determine how successful you are at Speaking the Truth without Making People Angry.

Avoid:

- Conversations that are attacking, pleading, disintegrating, shrugging, soft pedaling, or that include “compliment sandwiches” (a criticism sandwiched between two compliments).
- “Trigger words” that instantly make people defensive (“you” language that accuses, attacks and absolves that exaggerate the facts, and negates and negates the emotions).
- Interpretations (“Sally ignores everything I say”), emotional reactions (“I’m really irritated at Sally”), and desired ends (“Everything Sally writes has to be edited”). The HELP model eliminates the HERE and keeps conversations focused on the facts.

Instead: stick to fact-based communications that are candid, objective, specific, timely and intentional (“Yesterday there was two types in Sally’s memo”) by using one of three scripts:

L.D.E.A.L.S: the foundation script used in most tough conversations with employees who have moderate self-awareness, this conversation (which takes seconds to have) focuses on the facts, establishes accountability, and quickly moves on to finding solutions.

- Step 1: Invite them to partner: “Would you be willing to have a conversation with me about (insert the facts)?”
- Step 2: Draw a line: “I’d like to review the situation, make sure I’m on the same page as you.”
- Step 3: Eliminate blame: “And if we have different perspectives, we can discuss those and develop a plan for moving forward.”
- Step 4: Affirm their choice: “Does that sound OK? I can talk now, or if necessary, I have time later today.”
- Step 5: List corrective feedback: list the facts and then listen to determine whether or not they’ve made a corrective step.
- Step 6: Synchronize your understanding: “Tell me how you think we can work together to build on this and make things even more effective next time.”

What is Assertiveness?

- Passive: You see others’ needs as more important than your own. Lose-Win
- Assertive: You see your needs as equal in importance to others’. Win-Win
- Aggressive: You see your needs as more important than others’. Win-Lose
Assessing Your Assertiveness

1 = This is not at all like me
2 = This sounds a little like me
3 = This sounds a lot like me

1. I rarely take on tasks that are menial or uninteresting
2. I clearly express my feelings to my employees about their quality of work
3. I frequently express my feelings to my employees about their quality of work
4. My employees and peers come to me for help and guidance with office conflicts or work problems
5. I rarely take a backseat at meetings – people really know what I am thinking
6. I can ask my superiors for what I need, when I need it
7. After a meeting with one of my employees, I rarely replay the meeting over in my head, wishing it had gone differently
8. My employees and peers really respect what I say, and make changes based on my comments
9. When making a request, I am more likely to get what I ask for than my peers are
10. People say that I have a strong voice or a firm handshake
Assessing Your Assertiveness

Add it up

• 27 – 30 Fine tune
• 18 – 26 Some areas of strength, some to work on
• 10 – 17 Build up all areas
Self-Limiting Beliefs

• The critical-parent tape that constantly plays in our head, telling us all the reasons why we shouldn’t do something or why something won’t work
Common Self-Limiting Beliefs

• If I say no, he/she won’t be my friend anymore
• If I express displeasure, people won’t like me
• If I ask for something, people will think I’m abusing our relationship
Common Self-Limiting Beliefs

- If I say no, he/she won’t be my friend anymore
- If someone pressures me into doing something that’s not right for me, they’re not really my friend.
- If I express displeasure, people won’t like me
- If someone’s doing something that could harm them personally or professionally, they would be very upset if they found out that I could have helped them but didn’t.
- If I ask for something, people will think I’m abusing our relationship
- People like to help others. People would feel bad if they could have helped me but didn’t know because I didn’t ask.
Skill #1: Just Say No
Skill #1: Just Say “No”

Employee: “I need to take two days out of the office next week for a training.”

Boss: “I know it’s last minute, but I need you to work late again this week.” (you’re getting singled out)

Peer: “I think my employees got shortchanged on the annual bonus. What did your employees get?”
Skill #1: Just Say “No”

1. Preempt the question
2. Count to 3 or postpone
3. Acknowledge their request
4. Say the word NO
5. Own your decision
6. Sync your non-verbal message
7. Use the Broken Record
8. End the conversation
9. Practice and script
Preempt the Question

• In cases where you’re certain the question is coming, deliver your “NO” as an observation or directive
• Don’t explicitly acknowledge that they were going to make a request of you
Count to 3 or Postpone

- If you need time to decide...
  - Count to 3 if it’s a quick decision
  - Delay making a decision if it’s more involved
    “I’m not prepared to make a decision right now. I’ll need some time to think about it, and I’ll get back to you by the end of the day.”

- Repeat as necessary
- Practice not automatically saying YES
- HALT
Acknowledge their Request

- Acknowledge the importance they attribute to their request
  - I hear this request is important
  - It’s apparent this means a lot to you
Say the word NO

• Say NO
  – Not “Well I just don’t think so”
• Do NOT say “I’m sorry”
• Do NOT give a long-winded reason for your decision (this is just ammunition for them to convince you to say yes)
• Limit your reason to 1 sentence
Own your Decision

- Where possible, use the words "I won't" or "I've decided not to", rather than "I can't" or "I shouldn't".
- This emphasizes that you have made a choice.
Sync your non-verbal message

• Practice in front of a mirror
• Many people give conflicting non-verbal signals
  – Shaking head yes
  – Looking away
  – Covering mouth
  – Cowering
  – Trembling
Broken Record

• You may have to decline several times before the person hears you.
• It is not necessary to come up with a new explanation each time, just repeat your "no" and your original reason for declining.
• Once you’ve prepared your No and reason why, relax. Nothing can defeat this strategy.
End the Conversation

• If the person persists even after you have repeated your NO several times, use silence (easier on the phone), or change the topic of conversation.
• You also have a right to end the conversation.
• You may want to acknowledge any feelings another has about your refusal, "I know this will be a disappointment to you, but I won't be able to..."
• But generally, do not say “I’m sorry.”
Practice and Script

• Anticipate and rehearse answers to various comebacks
  - Put-offs, denials, jokes, sob stories, arguments, debates
• Practice until confident
• Create note cards or crib notes
Employee: “I need to take two days out of the office next week for a training.”

“I hear that this training is very important to you, however, our team needs to get this project done by Friday and you are an integral part of the team. So I’m saying No to the training.”
Boss: “I know it’s last minute, but I need you to work late again this week.” (you’re getting singled out)

“I understand that you may feel like I’m abandoning you, however, as I mentioned last week, I’ll be leaving at my normally scheduled time this week.”
Peer: “I think my employees got shortchanged on the annual bonus. What did your employees get?”

It’s apparent that you really want these numbers. However, we were both explicitly told not to share these numbers, so I’m going to abide by that and not distribute the numbers.”
Skill #2: Making a Request
Skill #2: Making a Request

What’s the problem? FEAR

• Don’t have the right to ask
• Afraid to be “shot down”
• Entitled or controlling
• Expect others to be “mind-readers”
Building Your Skills: The Request

1. Define the Situation
2. Be Specific
3. Define the Benefits
Building Your Skills: The Request

1. Define the Situation

“I noticed that we are behind on sending out billing statements”

2. Be Specific

“I’d like you to go through the files, print a list of the patients that haven’t been billed yet, and put those statements together by Friday.”

3. Define the Benefits

“This will put us in a better position for next month, and we will all feel less rushed”
Skill #3: Expressing Displeasure
Rules for Expressing Displeasure

1. Use factual descriptions instead of judgments
   - "This is sloppy work." (Aggressive)
   - "The pages in this report are out of order." (Assertive)

2. Avoid exaggerations
   - "You never are on time!" (Aggressive)
   - "You were 15 minutes late today. That's the third time this week." (Assertive)
3. Express thoughts, feelings, and opinions reflecting ownership
- "He makes me angry." (Denies ownership of feelings)
- "I get angry when he breaks his promises." (Assertive and owns feelings)

4. Use "I" not "You"
- "You always interrupt my stories!" (Aggressive)
- "I would like to tell my story without being interrupted." (Assertive)
“I” Statements

- Behavior -- what it is, exactly, that the other person has done or is doing
- Effect -- what is happening because of their behavior
- Feelings -- what effect does their behavior have on your feelings?

- "When you come late to the meeting (behavior) I feel angry (feelings) because we have to repeat information the rest of us have already heard (effect)."
Practice & Script

- Create a Script!
- Write it down
- Practice
- Imagine various situations
- Write and practice responses

1. Define & Assess Assertiveness
2. Self-Limiting Beliefs
3. Toughest Situations
   1. Just Say No
